Following up on his successful collaboration with Galerie Perrotin earlier this year, Parisian gallerist François Laffanour has joined forces with Brussels-based art collector Charles Riva to present LEVEL, an exhibition that once again brings collectible design in conversation with contemporary art. On the design side, Laffanour has contributed iconic mid-century French works by Jean Prouvé, Pierre Jeanneret, and Le Corbusier, as well as contemporary pieces by Korean designer Choi Byung Hoon. Riva, meanwhile, has contributed paintings and prints by conceptual American artists like Paul McCarthy, Richard Prince, and Christopher Wool. The show in Paris runs through April 29th before traveling to Brussels, where it will be on view at the Charles Riva Collection from April 19th through July 1st.
